Title: “Young Money”

Their project, titled “ Young Money,” was created to inform junior and senior high school students of the available resources for financing and education opportunities after high school. They put emphasis on how a budget, career choices, and lifestyle choices will affect personal finance. They gave students a test provided by the Counsel of Economic education, and then had an assembly that focused on financial responsibility. After the assembly, students were tested again to see how much financial knowledge they had gained.
