

Volunteering Inspires Teens

FCCLA REPORTS

(NAPS)—A recent survey conducted by Family, Career and Community Leaders of America (FCCLA) found that today's youth feel that community service is a top concern. Statistics show that if youth participate in community service at an early age, they are more likely to continue participating as an adult.

FCCLA has provided real world learning through community service since its founding in 1945. FCCLA members develop, plan, carry out, and evaluate projects to improve the quality of life in their communities. Projects reflect youth concerns such as teen pregnancy, parenting, family relationships, financial literacy, nutrition, fitness, teen violence prevention, and career exploration.

On a national level, members have united in efforts such as the collection of over 208,000 minutes for phone cards given to the U.S. military personnel serving overseas. This allowed them to stay connected with their families. For more information about FCCLA, please visit www.fcclainc.org.
